

The Tiffin Tribune.

LOOKES & BLYMYER,
Editors and Proprietors.

OFFICE—West Market street, opposite
Ohio House.

THURSDAY MORNING, MARCH 18, '90.

Spring Elections.

We hope our friends in the different townships will bear in mind that the time is rapidly approaching for the Spring election. But little need be said upon the subject, as all will see the propriety of due attention being paid to it. Let us through an organization be had as if a State election were to be held. Select the best men for offices and work faithfully for their election. Do this whether the party in the township has a majority or is in the minority. A thorough and effective organization at the Spring election is a sure sign of success at more prominent elections.

The Cabinet.

At last the question of whom the Cabinet is to be composed is settled. The following is the Cabinet complete:

Secretary of State—Hamilton Fish, of New York.

Secretary of Treasury—Geo. S. Boutwell, of Massachusetts.

Secretary of War—Gen. John A. Rawlins, of Illinois.

Secretary of the Interior—Gen. J. D. Cox, of Ohio.

Secretary of the Navy—Adolph E. Borie, of Pennsylvania.

Postmaster General—A. D. Crosswell, of Maryland.

Attorney General—E. R. Hoar, of Massachusetts.

We made mention of all but the first three last week.

Hon. Hamilton Fish is a vigorous man of sixty years of age. He has been in public life a great deal, having been a Whig member of the N. Y. Legislature for a number of years; Governor of New York one term and member of the United States Senate from 1851 to 1857.

Since his retirement from political life, which ended with his Senatorial term, he has traveled in Europe and spent considerable time in familiarizing himself with the governments of the countries he has visited. His abilities are excellent.

Hon. Geo. S. Boutwell is one of Massachusetts' most able men. He was originally a Democrat and held several offices under the Democrats.

In 1851 he was elected Governor of Massachusetts by Democrats and Free Soilers. When the Republican party was organized he became a member of it, and has been ever since.

During the war he held the position of Commissioner of Internal Revenue, but resigned to accept a position in Congress, which he has since held.

He was one of the managers of the impeachment trial. We believe he will make a good Secretary of the Treasury.

Gen. John A. Rawlins, of Illinois, is a lawyer by profession. In the early part of the war he raised a regiment, after which he was tendered the position of Assistant Adjutant General on Grant's staff, with the rank of Captain. This he accepted. He was afterwards promoted to Lieutenant Colonel and appointed Chief of Staff. After several promotions, he was finally made Major-General in the Regular Army.

The Ohio General Assembly has passed an act which requires the Auditor of State to furnish annually to each county auditor a statement of the aggregate number of horses, cattle, sheep, mules and asses, on or before the first of August, in each year, which statement the county auditors shall furnish for publication in their several counties. The county auditors, on or before July 1st of each year, are required to transmit to the Auditor of State an abstract of the number of the said animals returned for taxation in their counties.

A correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette discovered a scheme last week, by which the Democratic members of the Legislature proposed to re-district the State so as to secure to themselves thirteen Congressmen. The thing is not likely to be done, for some of the Democrats in the Legislature oppose the action on the ground that it is too bear-faced a scheme of gerrymandering, and would ruin all future hope of their success.

Eleven States have already ratified the suffrage amendment of the Constitution. The Lower Houses of the Georgia and the Pennsylvania Legislatures have also voted to ratify it, but the Senates of both States have yet to take action.

E. B. Washburne has been appointed Minister to France. He preferred this position to that of Secretary of State on account of poor health.

Spring Election.

Republicans of Seneca County.

In view of the purely local matters of our elections this Spring, your Central Committee do not feel justified in advising regular nominating Conventions.

It is hoped, however, and the Republicans in their respective Townships and Wards, throughout the county, are earnestly desired to consult and co-operate in securing the election of good men to every office.

G. J. KEES, Chairman,
Rep. Cen. Com.

Tiffin, March 16, '90.

Finance—How to Handle the Subject.

Some of our exchanges are making a terrible fuss over the fact, that the Cincinnati Gazette has made a slip in its financial arguments, and proceeds to read it out of the party. They claim that it has got to arguing in favor of a policy similar to that given by Gen. Cary, etc.

Now this is not right. Let any of these fault-finders attempt, as the Gazette did, to make financial matters clear and if they don't get themselves off their feet in the end, we are mistaken. Our finances is a subject that requires delicate handling. It will do to take one branch of the subject and pound away at it incessantly and let all the other branches go, but to take all parts of it and try to argue them down to a reasonable condition is more than any one has yet been able to do—the finances get the upper hands and the defeated writer is left all abroad.

There is but one way to "do" the finances—follow the style of the N. Y. Tribune. That is like this: Take one idea—Resumption, greenbacks or bonds—and hammer at it all the time. Work it up in every conceivable way. Roll it out, it day, turn it round to-morrow, make it long the next day, shorten it the day after that, and so on for an indefinite time, or as long as ink will run. That is the way the New York Tribune does, and it has got credit for consistency, as well as a good understanding of finances.

The foregoing receipt is an infallible one for which we charge nothing.

"Mack" of the Cincinnati Enquirer, recently suggested that Gen. Samuel F. Cary, M. C., would make an excellent candidate for the Democracy for Governor of Ohio.

The Advertiser thereupon pitches into Mack for the suggestion, and will have none of Cary, because he is a turn-coat—and in that he hits Mack—used to abuse the Democracy, etc. Mack returns to the charge and thinks that the fact that Cary used to abuse the Democracy should not be an objection to him in the eyes of the editor of the Advertiser who has been any time these four years a candidate for office under the lamented A. J., and adds, "didn't Andy Johnson do likewise?" Mack further accuses the Advertiser editor of being the only man from Ohio in attendance upon the Democratic National Convention who secretly believed that Pendleton ought not to be nominated, and says he expressed himself to that effect in an interview with Johnson before the 4th of July last.

It is but justice to the resident editor of the Advertiser to state that Mack does not refer to him in his remarks, but has his eye upon W. W. Armstrong, who is sufficiently ubiquitous to edit a paper here and one in Cleveland at once,—at least to have his name in each paper as editor.

New Hampshire.

Lively Little New Hampshire did its duty nobly on the 9th inst. The result of the election was a Republican majority of 4,500 against 2,523 of the year previous. Gains were made in members of the Legislature, and a full Congressional delegation was elected. The following is the ticket elected: "Governor, Oaslow Stearns; R. R. Commissioner, Samuel D. Quarley; Congress, 1st District, Jacob H. Elia; 2d District, Aaron F. Stevens; 3d District, Jacob Benton.

Sufficiently good for New Hampshire.

Mr. Binkley attempted an assault on Mr. Rollins in the street, on the 15th inst., but the latter got out of his reach. Binkley shortly after met Mr. Harlan, knocked the latter down and proceeded to beat him, when the crowd interfered and took Binkley off.

A man living in Bucyrus, who bears the suggestive name of Beer—famously known to his friends as Tom Beer—is spoken of for the next Democratic candidate for Governor of Ohio. Tom is what might be called a "bully good fellow," but he can't be Governor.

The amount of fractional currency printed last week was $562,500; shipments, $550,700; National Bank notes issued, $145,600; actual circulation, $299,091,923; fractional currency destroyed, $750,500.

The Answer.

The Advertiser answers the questions we asked it regarding the conduct of the Commissioners—after it had constituted itself their defender—nearly as follows:

To the first question about the Commissioners' lively bill being upwards of $900, it says:

"If the official records show a certain thing they must be taken as correct until proved otherwise."

Rather a curious idea that "they" must be considered correct till proved otherwise. Who is to prove the thing otherwise? Have the Commissioners the right to correct the official records to prove what they wish them to show?

The second question in regard to that Commissioner who—it is said—rides to town in the cars and charges the county $3.50 for livery hire, the Advertiser pronounces an "unmitigated falsehood." So of the fourth question, "Our readers will bear in mind that the fourth question related to $400 the Commissioners were said to have paid to a retiring Sheriff."

To the third question the Advertiser says that one of the Commissioners has a gold pen belonging to the County.

It will be noticed that in these answers the Advertiser continues to keep its readers in the dark as to what questions were asked.

In connection with the above referred to, the Advertiser states that it would be better for the editors of the Tribune, to get more acquainted with matters here before charges of corruption and fraud were made against the Commissioners. That is all very well to talk. We made no charges, but simply stated what reports were in circulation. Our opponent should look to that.

Regarding that $100,000,000 annually stolen by the members of "our" party from the revenue, we have only to say that Johnson has had control of official patronage for some time past and that ninety-nine hundredths of revenue officials are Democrats rather than Republicans. Will Democratic revenue officers steal?—perish the thought!

We must stop right here. We perhaps will notice what the Advertiser says regarding the National Debt, etc., in the future. We assure the Advertiser that its answers are hardly up to the point, and will not satisfy grumbling Democrats—and particularly the Prosecuting Attorney of the County, who is said to have declared that he would proceed against the Commissioners for certain of their doings. Look a little farther. Perhaps you will see something that will remove the scales from your eyes.

Congressional.

SENATE, March 10.—Bills were introduced to establish additional bonds, and to secure a redemption of their circulation in coin. Referred to the Committee on Finance; to provide levees to secure the low lands of Arkansas and Missouri from inundation, and to encourage the settlement and cultivation thereof. Referred; to authorize the appointment of a Board of Commissioners to examine the claims of loyal persons in States lately in rebellion, for supplies furnished to the military forces of the United States. Referred.

The House Bill to repeal the Tenure of Office Act was called up. After considerable discussion the bill was referred.

No report of House proceedings.

SENATE, March 11.—Bills were introduced as follows: To grant 2,000,000 acres of land for the benefit of public schools in District of Columbia—referred; to dispose with the test oath in post office service. The bill to strengthen the public credit was taken up, but without definite action. The Senate adjourned till Monday.

House not in session.

HOUSE, March 12.—A resolution for the appointment of a joint committee on Indian Affairs was passed. A resolution, fixing the day of adjournment of the session the last Friday in March, passed. A resolution instructing the Judiciary Committee to report a bill on the subject of Naturalization, was passed. Mr. Schenck's bill for strengthening the public credit was introduced. The second session, regarding contracts to pay coin, was struck out—years 89, says 57, and the bill passed—years 87, says 40. The Committee on Elections, Mr. Paia, of Wisconsin, Chairman, was announced, and the Speaker stated that he would announce all the committees next Monday. Mr. Boutwell's resignation was received. Adjourned until Monday.

The following appointments of Commissioners of the Union Pacific Railroad have been made by the Secretary of the Interior: Isaac N. Morris, of Illinois, vice Frank P. Blair, Jr.; Gen. Gouverneur Warren, vice Gen. N. B. Buford; and Hon. James K. Wilson, of Iowa, vice Cornelius Wendell.

Election day—April 4th—is near at hand. Nominate your officers and labor to elect them.

Legislative.

Our Legislative summary for last week is necessarily short.

HOUSE, Tuesday.—No quorum was present.

SENATE, the same day, nothing done but to receive a message from the Governor transmitting a copy of the proposed Constitutional Amendment which was referred to the Committee on Federal Relations.

SENATE, Wednesday.—An excited Democrat offered resolutions setting forth the danger to which our liberties were exposed because Grant had asked Congress to suspend the law that prevented A. T. Stewart from taking a seat in the Cabinet. The resolutions were ordered to be printed. The members of the move will be understood when it is stated that Grant had withdrawn his request before these resolutions were presented but the Democrats hadn't found it out.

In the House, the same day considerable time was spent discussing a bill regarding bank shares and stocks to be taxed in the county, township or ward where the holder lived instead of where the bank was located. It was defeated. The Senate bill authorizing county Treasurers to accept bonds issued for the construction of roads in payment of taxes levied for the construction of such roads, on petition of a majority of resident land owners, was passed and became a law.

SENATE, Thursday, a House bill that provides that a city or village benefited by the construction of a ditch or drain, shall pay a part of the cost of the same, instead of assessing the whole cost on the owners of the lands through which the ditch passes was passed.

The same most address given by all. The President had to bid adieu to his Cabinet. "My tried and true friends," he commenced, when Randall broke in with the cheerful remark, "best wishes, my 'tried and true friends' without the 'tried.'"

"My legs 'your tried friends' was in that gang of counterfeiters which left the presence. They were not only tried but convicted."

Secretary Seward was visibly affected. That afternoon he had heard on an island for sale, the principal volcano on the island had stopped smoking, and he went to think he had at last found a complete anesthetic for it. It was offered for $20,000,000, and he considered the price a mere bagatelle.

Secretary Vance was the only cheerful one in the party. He had no idea that he was to step into Secretary of the Navy—his expected tour along the north had happened—Seward and Randall had been in for an hour to make him comprehend the situation—that their work was a change—but to no purpose. He could get it through his intellect, but not through his feelings. He had a model of a Erie canal boat which he had determined to remodel into a revenue cutter. He kept saying, "I don't know what I'm going to do under these circumstances. There ain't no more difference between Lincoln and Johnson than there is between Johnson and Grant, is there? I agreed with Lincoln and with Johnson, and I still agree with Grant, don't you? Why should I differ with Grant?"

Randall smiled a sardonic smile at the anecdotal, and remarked that in (Randall had a good time in it, anyhow, the recollection whereof the 4-3 Abolitionist could not rob him, should have been added—that he didn't want to hear any ill-will.

The same day in the House, a message transmitting the Fifteenth Amendment to the Constitution was received from the Governor. The Amendment was referred to the Committee on Federal Relations. Senate bills were passed authorizing sheriffs, on order of court, to sell goods levied on at wholesale, and to increase homestead exemption from $500 to $1,000.

SENATE, Saturday.—Nothing of importance was done.

And in the House, ditto.

NASBY.

The Last Cabinet Meeting—The End of the Johnson Regime as Described by Mr. Nasby.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 5, 1890.

The agency is over! A. Johnson, spurred by the thought that he didn't deserve a sweet home, in a moment of private opinion, and no more money than I am—not as much, for I am still a Postmaster.

It was in the air, the birth of the Johnson regime, and the voice of the thousands of the last of his Cabinet meeting. The first was an exasperated scene—the last the most mournful I ever witnessed. At the first we started out with high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al., to give us advice—and the voice of the thousands of patriotic white-washed officials began to speed—at the last there was left only those who had become so used that they couldn't get away, and were forever lost.

The last day of the Johnson regime was a day of high hopes, for in our official, with a Treasury to draw on which seemed to us to have no bottom, and with such men as Raymond, Wood, et al.,